IGP POWDER COATINGS

Details

The choice of IGP-HWFclassic 5903E83256F10 to coat the façade panels of the Inselhalle Lindau proved to be a perfect match for the architectural concept. The copper-coloured powder coating solution not only provides robust protection against the elements, but also harmonizes perfectly with the materials used in the construction of this impressive hall. The warm copper tones of the coating add a touch of elegance to the façade while conveying a timeless aesthetic that blends seamlessly with the surrounding landscape and historic ambience of Lindau. The carefully selected color complements the natural elements of the surroundings while accentuating the architectural details of the island hall. 1.2 tons of powder was used to coat all parts of the hall, demonstrating not only a remarkable amount of material, but also the thoroughness and precision with which this architectural masterpiece was constructed. The use of high-quality materials and meticulous craftsmanship are characteristic of the Inselhalle Lindau and underline its status as a significant cultural and architectural landmark. In addition, the powder coating not only contributes to the aesthetic appeal of the hall, but also ensures its durability and resistance to the changing weather conditions on Lake Constance. This will ensure that the Inselhalle Lindau retains its majestic appearance for years to come and continues to impress visitors from all over the world.
